CHIEF JUSTICE WAITE.

chief Justice Waite.

Morrison R. Waite is a native of Congesteut. He is now in his 58th year. Mr. Waite was a class-mate and intimate friend of the Hon. Wm. M. Evarts, and Judge Pierpoint in the Yale class of '37, and is the son of the Hon. Henry M. Waite, a former Supreme Judge of Connecticut. He has mingled but very little in pulities, devoting himself exclusively to the law. While never in any sense a partusian, his political opinions have always been decided and well known to all. Originally a Henry Clay Whig, he acted with the Whig party until its dissolution, when he joined the Republican party, and has since been thoroughly in accord with it in all points. His father for a number of years was Chief Justice of Connecticut, and it was with him that the present nominee studied law.

In 1838 he moved to Maumee City,

Ohio, and began practice. Though a young man, he took a prominent position at the bar. After the removal of the county seat to Toledo, he changed his residence to that place, and as attorney, took charge of the commercial releases. ook charge of the commercial interest took charge of the commercial interests which were then developing at that point. He has always been known as a man of uncompromising integrity, and many of the most difficult commercial cases that have arisen in Toledo have been settled by simple reference to him—his word receiving the sanction of law by both parties. His practice, both there and in surrounding counties, was for years very large. Mr. Waite is a thoroughbred lawyer, has always refused to enter political life, and has never consented, except when assured by his constituents that they desired the sacrifice on his part as a when assured by his constituents that they desired the sacrifice on his part as a personal favor.

During the late rebellion Mr. Waite supported Mr. Lancoin's policy rather than that of the extreme abolitionists. In 1849 he was elected by the Whigs to the general assembly of Ohio, although the district was strong dissatisfaction with the regular Republican nomines for congress, James M. Ashley; and at last Mr. Waite was induced, much against his wishes, to accept an independent nomination. Although he received the enormous majority of 1,200 in the city of Toledo, he was defeated, Mr. Ashley carrying the outlying counties. Mr. Waite was often importuned to take the field again against Mr. Ashley, but invariably declined, as his lucrative law practice would suffer by such neglect of it. In 1868 Mr. Ashley was defeated by a bolt of the Republicans to the Democrats.

In 1864 Mr. Waite was tendered a cent

In 1864 Mr. Waite was tendered a seat in the Ohio Supreme Court, but declined it. In 1871 President Grant appointed him as one of the representatives of the United States at the Geneva Board of Arbitration.

Upon his return from the Geneva congress he was welcomed home with a grand and spontaneous ovation, in which citizens of both parties is one of the delegates from Lucus county to the Constitutional Convention, and unanimously elected. Upon the organization of that body he was elected President.

During the last campaign he delivered two or three speeches in support of the policy of the Republican party. Mr.

Waite is in moderate circumstances, owning property valued at about $100,000, though the large income he has enjoyed for years from his law practice would have made him very wealthy had he so desired.
